His Royal Highness the Duke of Cumberland has detached some Battalions of Dutch Troops for the Defence of the Province of Zealand, who are put under the Command of General La Roque. Some Dutch Men of War are ordered for the Protection of the Coast of Zealand; and all the armed Boats and Vessels that are at Hand, are sent into the Schelde, to obstruct any Embarkation that may be attempted by the Enemy; and such of his Britannick Majesty's Ships as are in those Seas, will cruize near the Mouth of the Schelde for the same Purpose.
